

Notes:

1. Elaine Marks and Isabelle de Courtivron, eds, New French Feminisms (Brighton, Sussex: The Harvester Press, 1980), p. 137n.
2. "Male Critics and Feminist Criticism", Essays in Criticism, Vol XXXIII, No.4 (October 1983), p.265.
3. ibid
4. It being eminently plausible, I think, to suggest that all human life is in a sense a process of reading, these concerns — for the health of society and for the health of literary criticism — need not be taken as readily separable or mutually exclusive.

Edward Mycuc

THE FALKLANDS EXPEDITION

I speak of triumph and rout of new statesmen the new Canutes the latest issue all the jolly tars old England the good frigate this splendid venture the prime loveless minister the last blond course of betrayal the bloody epidemic
this Falklands expedition I speak of triumph and rout of new statesmen the new Canutes
the latest issue all the jolly tars old England the good frigate this splendid venture the prime loveless minister the last blond course of betrayal the bloody epidemic this Falklands.