

Chris Lennings

FRIDAY EARLY OPENER

There are old smells
of stale ash and beer
on fingers as they wind around the glasses at the harbour early opener.

the lights are dull
and cast deep shadows
over the faces of the night shift.

The quiet whispers are disturbed by the young man who enters, looking for the loo and leaves without buying a beer.