

Stephen Roberts

OUTLET

His dog is barking outside.

Night. The bedroom is oppressive.

Dog won't settle.

His own thoughts are hot.

He can't settle either.

He'd like to bark

his rage to the Moon, to neighbours

under cover of night.

He even wouldn't mind if a neighbour barked back or perhaps pitched an old shoe.

